

Hazmo21: GOODBYE CRUEL WORLD

Central Stalingrad, USSR, 16 September 1942: Soviet strongpoints throughout the city had to be assaulted in nightmarish, close-quarters fighting. Nowhere was this ferocity more in evidence than at Railway Station No. 1 . . .

Hazmo22: WAITING FOR THE WORMS

Central Stalingrad, USSR, 17 September 1942: In some sectors, the Germans were able to push all the way to the Volga and directly interdict Russian reinforcements ferrying across the river. The 13th Guards launch a desperate counterattack to eliminate the threat . . .

Hazmo23: EMPTY SPACES

Central Stalingrad, USSR, 21 September 1942: The Germans make a renewed push to reach the Volga, with the object of splitting the 62nd Guards in two. In their way stand the stalwart 13th Guards, along with scattered remnants of NKVD militia . . .

Hazmo24: COMFORTABLY NUMB

The Red October Factory, USSR, 24 October 1942: Grimly determined to prevent the 62nd Guards from being cut in half, the Russians launch an attack from the south to buy enough time to enable the 39th Guards to ferry across the river . . .

Hazmo25: THE TRIAL

The Red October Factory, USSR, 24 October 1942: After the Germans seize Halls 1 and 2 of the Red October Factory, the Soviets launch a furious counterattack aimed at reoccupying these vital strongpoints . . .

Hazmo26: THE HAPPIEST DAYS OF OUR LIVES

The Red October Factory, USSR, 10 November 1942: By now, the ominous approach of winter and dwindling supply lines have forced the invaders' hand. After a relatively lull in the fighting, the Germans launch one last massive offensive intended to break the back of the Soviet 62nd Army . . .

Hazmo27: THE SHOW MUST GO ON

The Red October Factory, USSR, 10 November 1942: Operation HUBERTUS, the final effort to capture the Red October Factory complex (and thus Stalingrad itself), was launched in the early morning with a massive artillery barrage and concentrated Stuka attacks. Soon thereafter, German pioneers and infantry storm the Martenovskii Shop from two directions . . .

Hazmo28: RIGHTEOUS RED SCYTHE

Kletskaya, USSR, 19 November 1942: Operation URANUS sought to cut off von Paulus' 6th Army at Stalingrad. At Kletskaya, the unusually resolute Romanian 13th Army stands in the path of the seemingly unstoppable Soviet juggernaut . . .

Hazmo29: THE HEIGHTS OF HUBRIS

South of Verkhne-Kumsky, USSR, 18 December 1942: Operation WINTERGEWITTER, the attempt to relieve Stalingrad, could not be allowed to succeed. The Soviet 4th Mechanized Corps, firing from prepared positions on the high ground, resolved to stop the Germans in their tracks . . . or die trying . . .

Hazmo30: ORPHANS OF SATURN

Nikolayevka, USSR, 26 January 1943: In the wake of the success of Operation SATURN, the commander of the elite Italian Alpini, Gabriele Gabriele Nasci, knows he has no real choice. Faced with the utter annihilation of his unit, he orders a daring – almost suicidal – breakout to the west . . .

Scenario design by Chad Cummins and Chuck Hammond